March 12th 2019 Materialwissenschaftliches Zentrum für Energiesysteme (MZE)

Karlsruher Institut für Technologie

This science center represents a new architecture for public science buildings and is worth to visit and talk about it. The spirit of the age is communication and collaboration irrespective of the art of science realized in this building. 15 institutes of different fields on 4.300 m² are concentrated in a building of contemporary architecture expecting future solutions of energy transformation and storage. The MZE impressively represents a convenient solution to integrate a state-of-the art building into a campus situation with structures from different epochs.
